

Capitol Happenings

Regionalism in Connecticut

Wednesday, January 27th - 5:30-7:30pm
Old Judiciary Room - State Capitol

Last year at Capitol Happenings the discussion focused on the looming budget deficit. This year, as the deficit continues to grow, towns, cities and the state continue to look at all possible cost saving measures, and regionalism seems to be gaining momentum. But what does that mean for towns, cities and the residents of the state? The notion of regional activity has not been received too well in the past in this state, "the land of steady habits." Join us as we hear from state and local officials about how this is working, what other projects are in the works, and what are some of the concerns about regionalism eroding local control.
